Future Continuous Tense

[Action Verbs, Be Verbs, Possessive Forms]

Future Continuous Tense : Action Verbs

Affirmative ➞

Subject + will be + verb(-ing) + object/time phrase

Example ➞

We will be watching the match tonight.

Negative ➞

Subject + will not be + verb (-ing) + object/time phrase

Example ➞

They won't be playing in the park tomorrow.

Interrogative ➞

Will + subject + be + verb(-ing) + object/time phrase ?

Example ➞

Will she be driving to the office tomorrow?

Note:

Use will be with all subjects to describe an action that will be in progress at a specific time in the future.

Shall be may be used with I and we in formal English, but will be is standard today.

Future Continuous Tense : Be Verbs

Affirmative ➞

Subject + will be + being + complement

Example ➞

You will be being very patient during the session.

Negative ➞

Subject + will not be (won't be) + being + complement

Example ➞

He won't be being honest if he hides the truth.

Interrogative ➞

Will + subject + be + being + complement?

Example ➞

Will he be being rude again?

Note:

The form will be being is grammatically correct but very rare. It is used to emphasize temporary future behavior or a continuing state, mainly in formal or precise contexts.

Future Continuous Tense : Possessive Forms

Affirmative ➞

Subject + will be + having + activity/experience

Example ➞

I will be having lunch with my boss at 1 PM.

Negative ➞

Subject + will not be + having + activity/experience

Example ➞

They won't be having any fun at that boring event.

Interrogative ➞

Will + subject + be + having + activity/experience?

Example ➞

Will you be having lunch with us?

Note:

Do not use will be having to show possession.

e.g. ~~I will be having a car.~~

However, will be having is correct when having means an activity, experience, or temporary event.

I will be having fun.
